

ANA MANERO SALVADOR

CURRICULUM

Professor of Public International Law and International Relations at the Universidad Carlos III de Madrid. Her research interests include international economic law, international human rights law, international environmental law and European Union external action. He has been working for more than a decade on issues related to the impact of climate change in the Arctic, analyzing the applicable regulatory framework, especially in relation to the delimitation of marine areas, existing disputes, the exploitation of resources and their protection and preservation. She has developed teaching and research tasks in European, American and African universities and has received several research awards, including the Julian Marias Award for under 40 years and the Award of Excellence of the Social Council of the University Carlos III of Madrid. She is the Spanish delegate to the Social Sciences and Humanities Working Group of the International Arctic Science Committee.